Artworks Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, Offers Works by Mary Blackwell-Chapman and Seth Moskowitz

Artworks Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, is presenting two new exhibits including: UnSettled: Human Migration in the 21st Century, featuring works by Mary Blackwell-Chapman and Southeast by Southwest: Winston-Salem and Santa Fe, featuring works by Seth Moskowitz, on view through May 26, 2018. Receptions will be held on May 4, from 7-10pm and May 6, from 2-4pm.

Mary Blackwell-Chapman's show of ceramic and mixed media sculpture reflects her interest in the movement of people around the globe. Humankind has always been on the move, whether out of curiosity, social stress, political upheaval, war, or difficulties caused by climate change or weather. A predominant image in the show is the boat form, symbolic of an individual's precarious life journey, a family's uprooted home, a culture's loss and insecurity. The 21st Century has brought unprecedented human migration and displacement. What does it feel like to be a foreigner, a stranger?

County and enjoy three grown children and two granddaughters.

"Southeast by Southwest" is a non-existent, paradoxical compass point that explores the (dis)similarities of the geographic and emotional landscapes he encountered while living in North Carolina and New Mexico. In many ways, Winston-Salem and Santa Fe exist on different planes, but both find strong, and sometimes similar, resonance and expression in Moskowitz's art.

Moskowitz was born and raised in New York City and moved to Winston-Salem in 1979 after two years in the nation's capital, working at the Washington Post. He spent three years as a reporter and columnist for the Winston-Salem Journal before joining the public relations department at R.J. Reynolds Industries in 1982. His career with Reynolds has included a two-year assignment in Santa Fe, NM, and he is currently director of communications for RAI Services Company.

Moskowitz is a member of Artworks Gallery, Associated Artists of Winston-Salem and The Muddy River Art Association. His work has appeared in national juried art exhibits and is often displayed in galleries and community exhibits in and around Winston-Salem, including the Sawtooth School for Visual Art's gallery and shop.

Salem College in Winston-Salem, NC, Offers Senior Thesis Exhibit

Salem College in Winston-Salem, NC, will present Pneuma: A Senior Thesis Exhibition, presented by the Department of Art, Art History and Design, on view from May 4 - 18, 2018. On May 4 artists' presentations will be offered at 5pm with a reception will be held from 6-8pm.

This exhibition is a survey of art that dwells on the way our souls interact with the world around us. The by-products of these interactions become the catalyst for our creativity, a purpose that our brushes readily accept and transform into a work of art. In this meditative state, we contemplate the unfiltered happiness found in the everyday, the raw emotions and state of beings we surpass, the dreams that give us a new perspective on situations and the true beauty found not only in nature but in our perceptions of the individuals in our lives. We transform all this things into not just images and color, but into a message that the viewer can freely interpret. These extensive bodies of work are a sanctuary for our zealous minds and the heart-wrenching stories of our past and present.

Presenting artists include: Morgan Minton Harris, Megan Hucks, Anastasia Menachem, Dulca Rivas Rangel, Julia
